

2016 NOCALL Fall Workshop
Hot or Not: You Be the Judge
Friday, October 14, 2016
California Judicial Conference Center (San Francisco)

8:30 a.m. – 9:00 a.m.
Sequoia Room Foyer

Registration

9:00 a.m. – 9:15 a.m.
Sequoia Room

Welcome Remarks

Holly Riccio, NOCALL Education Chair

9:15 a.m. – 10:30 a.m.
Sequoia Room

Legal Tech’s Next Generation Disruptors: Watson and Beyond

Watson, AI, and data analytics are buzzwords we are all hearing and reading about, but what is the current landscape of these (and other) legal technology developments? And, what is out there beyond what has already been conjured up? This panel will discuss both specific innovations and the broader legal tech community, the implications for both providers and consumers, and what role(s) legal information professionals can play, now and going forward.

Moderator: Kathy Skinner, Morrison & Foerster LLP

Speakers: Pablo Arredondo, Casetext

Andrew Arruda, ROSS Intelligence

Itai Gurari, Judicata

Daniel Lewis, Ravel Law

10:30 a.m. – 10:45 a.m.
Sequoia Room

Break

10:45 a.m. – 12:00 noon
Sequoia Room

Disruption in the Courts: Legal Tech’s Role in Criminal Justice Reform

Earlier this year, the Marshall Project published an article on their web site on technology in the criminal justice system, stating that there are thirteen questions we can’t answer right now because we don’t have the data. Some of these questions include how many people have a criminal record, how many shootings are there in the United States, and what percentage of those eligible for parole are released. Many jurisdictions are making strides in using data analytics internally, to drive enforcement efforts and apply data science to the prosecutorial process. Emerging technologies—such as Bitcoin and blockchains—are also being used by cybercriminals as part of the dark web, but these technologies are also being heralded as the future of recordkeeping and digital file management and security. Our panelists will discuss specific projects and developments, as well as trends for the future of the role of technologists in criminal justice reform.

Moderator: Mark Mackler, California Department of Justice

Speakers: Cristine Soto DeBerry, San Francisco District Attorney

Justin Erlich, Special Assistant Attorney General to

California Attorney General Kamala Harris

12:00 noon – 12:30 p.m.

California Judicial Center Library Tour

Given By Jessica Brasch

12:30 p.m. – 1:30 p.m.

Catalina A/B, Redwood A/B

Lunch

Generously Sponsored by CEB

1:30 p.m. – 2:45 p.m.

Sequoia Room

The Current (and Future) State of Cannabis Law

The National Cannabis Bar Association was formed last year by lawyers who saw a need to educate and connect with other attorneys in the cannabis industry for the purpose of providing excellent, ethical, and advanced legal assistance to this developing sector. NCBA is the first professional body to specialize in assisting and supporting attorneys who serve the cannabis industry, helping these attorneys navigate complex federal and state laws as well as local ordinances as the industry becomes increasingly regulated at all levels. In connection with this regulation, new services and resources are being developed for lawyers serving the cannabis industry, and the industry has seen widespread growth in media coverage. Join Ms. Riccio for a lively discussion with the NCBA founders that will provide an overview of the current legal cannabis industry, the most prominent and pressing legal issues faced by cannabis businesses, and growing trends in the near future.

Moderator: Holly Riccio, Nossaman LLP

*Speakers: Amanda Conley, NCBA Treasurer
Shabnam Malek, NCBA President*

2:45 p.m. – 3:00 p.m.

Sequoia Room

Closing Remarks

Michael Ginsborg, NOCALL President